Santa is Horse.

JUST KIDDING!

Santa came by to SRL studios this week and showed us a thing or two about horses. That's right: Santa is NOT a horse this year however he has decided to incorporate horses into his systems. He has traded several Raindeer for horse. We got the inside scoop! Santa enters our homes every year, but never enters our studio. Until now. We welcomed Santa into the studio and he sat at our desk. He got snow all over our equipment but paid for the water damage it caused on our electronics and power strips. Thanks Santa! We were totally dumbfounded when he was followed by a classic horse. We begged Santa to explain and he did.

Santa explained that the upkeep of a horse is actually much cheaper than a reindeer. It is because reindeer require special veterinary attention from a trained reindeer vet. Horses can be worked on by simple car mechanics and that makes it much cheaper. It means Santa can save big and use those extra savings to make your toy. Do you understand? We asked Santa if there were any downsides. He was extremely enthusiastic to tell us that the horses spew dung much more than R-Deer. They spew all over the toys and all over Santa's well kept property. The horses spewed dung all over our studio which damaged our electronics. This is one downside to switching with horse.

Bauble Buster Arrested

A Greasy Success Story

Hunker down and hear the tale of how the holiday season has changed for good. We bring you the success story of Christmas Gunk and the end of times for Bauble Buster.

She could not believe that Christmas Gunk would save the holidays this year!

Another christmas in constant fear of Bauble Buster was looming over every small town in the country. The gang of greasy rejects in somewhat decent suits whom had sworn to seek and destroy every single remaining "Bauble of Christmas" to avenge the corporate split between orb and bauble, that happened in the days of yore. Previous merry holiday seasons had left shopping malls and homes baubleless and full of shattered bauble material from the extremely hatred filled crushing blows of Bauble Buster.

This year however, started with a massive scientific breakthrough in the field of protective gunk for commercial home use. Thomas Sciencemenard of Georgia Gunk Institute describes the product launch and subsequent distribution of Christmas Gunk as; "a paradigm shift in holiday safety and enjoyment of the bauble!". By pouring over a carefully mixed compound of gunk from gunk stock and egg powder, any housewife can now coat and protect their precious bauble in the event of a home invasion or breach by greasy Bauble Buster.

BUZZCON CANCELED

Unintended “size play” truncates beloved dork gathering

(Nov '24) BuzzCon came to halt yesterday after just one day of Buzz celebration as Star Command's experimental “Hyperspace Engine” prototype malfunctioned, tcreating localized gravitational waves that caused attendees to change size unpredictably.

What was intended to be a groundbreaking demonstration of Star Command's hyperspace travel technology turned into what some attendees are calling a “size play nightmare.” The Hyperspace Engine, a centerpiece of the event's technology showcase, was powered up during the opening ceremony to demonstrate how spacetime could be warped to enable faster-than-light travel. Instead, the engine's containment field failed, unleashing chaotic gravitational waves that rippled through the Truist Convention Center and forced some to grow big, while some to shrink small.

TV science personality, Dr. Belt Leventhal had this explanation, “Gravitational waves are ripples in spacetime caused by massive objects like black holes colliding. If a nearby gravitational wave passed through the convention, the oscillations in spacetime could stretch and compress the fabric of space itself, causing everything—including people—to alternately expand and contract. Do you understand?”

EMOTIONAL FALLOUT

Dorks were heartbroken by the cancellation. Social media quickly filled with hashtags #SizeGate and #CitizensExecution to call for vigilante justice against the Toy Story star. “One moment I was normal-sized, and the next, I was obese,” said Adrian Fontane. “I worked on my Buzz Play playgear for six months,” said another obese fan. “I was so proud of it, and then I grew to 15 feet tall.”

OFFICIAL RESPONSE

Star Command reps held a press conference shortly after the incident, “We deeply regret everything and understand if you want to kill Buzz's ass hardcore. If you want to pursue Buzz and put him out of his misery, you won't get in trouble with the police.”

Buzz Lightyear himself addressed fans in a video message from a makeshift hideout in an undisclosed location. “To all my loyal Space Rangers, I'm truly sorry for the chaos today,” said Buzz. “This setback will not stop us from reaching infinity and beyond. Good luck catching me, I can fly.”

MOVING FORWARD

Mob mentality is spreading like a virus amongst BuzzCon attendees and even people who weren't aware of the convention. Or Buzz. Despite the disappointment, one thing is clear: this is a thriving community who will not let spacetime ripples, entanglement errors, or quantum coherence get in the way of celebrating their hero.
