TOM MONTREUX

INTERVIEWED, TO DEATH 9PM MONDAY, JANUARY 19TH

SO LONG, TOM.

The imminent interviewer of our time, the inquisitive Tom Montreux, will be flipping the script for a one-time-only, last-time-also, inverted interview during which he'll allow himself to be interviewed for 9 hours while undergoing a fatal intravenous transfusion of highly-corrosive industrial grade chemicals and barbiturates throughout his body's circulatory system LIVE on CBS on Monday, January 19th. Finally, viewers across the country will learn what makes Tom "tick": his hopes and dreams, new hobbies, and bittersweet stories of his childhood, until now wrapped taught in the twine of progressing age and dusted with the ash of his own ambition. Moments before the broadcast, Mr. Montreux will receive a continuous drip of sodium amylobarbitone and thio-pentone. After the first half of his interview, Tom will receive an intravenous transfusion, gradually supplanting his blood with a simple mixture of potassium chloride and citric acid. After exactly 9 hours of a no-doubt captivating interview conducted by Montreux's successor, Brent Kax, our steadfast and inquisitive anchor of 17 years will die. Tom has stated his decision is related to protesting a poison-for-prison deal between fluid firm Burlow Chemical and the private Georgia penitentiary Speedmont Correctional Facility.

"I am The Jerry Now." The Lyle Stormmper Story.

As I approached Mr. Stormmper's apartment on Manhattan's Upper West side, chills went down my damn spine. I rounded the corner of W 81st street and began to scan the numbers on the buildings. There it was, 129 West 81st Street, the address of Jerry Seinfeld's apartment in the infamous television series, "Seinfeld." There was Stormmper on the stoop. "I bought it!" he shouted. He was dressed in a signature Seinfeld style tight ass blue jean hiked up, appearing to suffocate his groin region. A coiffed mullet sat peacefully on his upper back and dangled in the wind. I froze on the sidewalk. "They said it couldn't be done, but here we are! I live in Seinfeld's world!" My lips quivered. "Oh-Ok?" I questioned. My nerves settled in the face of Stormmper's jovial demeanor. "Come, let me show you!" he exclaimed. I followed him inside, then up the stairs.

As we approached the front door to Stormmper's apartment, he stopped then turned around quickly to give me a short introductory speech. "Ok now I know it's not perfect. It's not exactly like the show, but I've prepared it the best I can. I am the Jerry now." I smiled and nodded. My nerves got the better of me once more and I began to sweat. There it was, apartment 5A, just like the show.

Nothing could prepare me for what was inside. Stormmper flung the door open and what lay inside can best be described as a total "shit show." Not only did the apartment look nothing like Jerry's classic home on the show, it did not resemble anything like a livable apartment whatsoever. All the furniture had been smashed apart and pools of some sort of liquid covered the floors. I looked over at Stormmper. He nodded then darted inside, beckoning me to join. I hesitantly entered and as soon as I did, the door miraculously slammed behind me.

"So... this is supposed to be Jerry's" I could not finish my question as Stormmper interrupted. "AHHHHHH-HHHH!" he let out an ear piercing scream. I scanned the room some more as Stormmper's scream lasted nearly a full minute. The apartment was full of cereal boxes which lay on top of some mass of what appeared to be dolls. I knelt down and knocked away several of the cereal boxes to reveal a mass of miniature baby-sized dolls with printed out pictures of Jerry Seinfeld's face crudely taped over their heads.

As I picked one up to examine it, the sound of breaking glass diverted my attention to the far side of the room where Stormmper was smashing out his own windows with a crowbar. He paused for a moment then looked back at me. He spoke softly now. "I am the Jerry Now." With that, Stormmper climbed out of the window and onto the fire escape before scurrying down it in an inhuman way, almost like some sort of tree monkey or frog. I ran over to the window and as soon as I did, felt a great heat behind me. The apartment was on fire.

I awoke later that night in Mount Sinai hospital. If you know where Stormmper is, please let our editors know, as we have more questions for him. Yes I am ok. Goodnight.
